BULLET OF ASSASSIN IS FATAL TO CERMAK

Death Ends Chicago Mayor's Valiant Fight At 6:57 A. M. Today; Family and Close Friends At His Bedside

(By Associated Press)
MIAMI, Fla., March 6.—Mayor Anton Cermak of Chicago, the victim of a bullet Giuseppe Zangara fired February 15 in an attempt to assassinate President Roosevelt, died in Jackson Memorial hospital today at 6:57 a. m. eastern standard time. Death followed a series of complications against which the Chicago executive had rallied valiantly time after time.

The family and close friends were at the bedside. Mrs. Floyd Kenley, a daughter, was holding one of her father's hands when he died. Vivian Graham, a granddaughter, held the other. The saddened group remained in the sun parlor of the mayor's room close to the death scene for several minutes.

"Oh, he wanted to live so much," Mrs. Richey, Graham, a daughter said. And Mrs. Frank Jirka, another daughter, added, "He fought so hard. He didn't want to die."

The mayor died peacefully. Father Sidney Morrison of St. Bartholomew's Catholic church, Chicago, had been praying at Cermak's bed for a time before he died.

Meanwhile, another victim of Zangara's bullets lay critically ill in the same hospital—Mrs. Joe H. Gill—Miami society woman, whose abdominal wound has become infected.

States Atty. N. Vernon Hawthorne said early today that immediate indictment of Zangara, on first degree murder charge, will be sought.

Jury Is Called

A call for assembly of the jury, now in recess, was begun at once. Dr. J. W. Snyder, one of the attending physicians, said the cause of Mayor Cermak's death was the "rancher wound in the right chest" which he received at Zangara's hands.

Preparations were made to take Mayor Cermak's body to Chicago on a special train. The tentative arrangements were for the train to leave about 4 or 5 p. m. today.

Colitis appeared first to complicate Cermak's condition and as this began to clear up, the mayor's heart showed signs of failure. Then pulmonary troubles developed and hope for his recovery waned. Glucose injections, sedatives, stimulants, blood transfusions and an oxygen tent all were used in the desperate attempt to save his life.

The mayor, growing steadily weaker, weathered the early crises almost by sheer power of a will to get well and a stout heart.

Mayor Cermak was shot the night of Feb. 15, by Giuseppe Zangara, a naturalized Italian bricklayer, who tried to take the life of President-elect Roosevelt, at a public reception in Bay Front park. Each of the five bullets he fired into the crowd around the Roosevelt car found a mark but none touched the president-elect as spectators deflected the assassin's aim by seizing his arm.

Born Near Prague

Cermak was born at Klado, near Prague in what was the Bohemia and is now Czechoslovakia, in 1873. He was brought to the United States by his parents when he was less than a year old.

The Cermaks' existence down to hard working settlement in the coal mining section of Braidwood, Ill., and Cermak went to work giving mules in the mines at the age of 11. Cermak's ambition however, led him to Chicago at the age of 17, and he started selling wood, building.

Hitler Government Wins In Landslide

(By Associated Press)
BERLIN, March 6.—That the Reichstag in all likelihood will adjourn for two years after a brief session is the opinion in government circles after the National Socialist landslide in the Reichstag and Prussian Diet elections yesterday gave the national government a decisive majority.

The cabinet will meet Tuesday to set the date for the Reichstag convocation.

The electoral endorsement of the Hitler government's "nationalistic revolution" with its policy of suppressing communists and socialists leaves no doubt that the next few months will be devoted to wiping out the last vestiges of both democracy and communism.

Your Check's Good At State Theater

Your bank check is good at the State theater.

This was the announcement today by the Walken Brothers, Salem theater operators, following the establishment, by presidential proclamation, of a four-day holiday.

In the event the movie-goer's funds are tied up as a result of the bank making, he may continue to see and hear his favorite film actors and actresses by writing out a check, payable to the State theater, for the exact amount of the admission. No change will be returned on the checks. A check for 25 cents will admit him in the afternoon. Ten cents is added at night. The checks will be held by the theater until the banks reopen.

Poor Eat 'Placards'

WUPPERTAL, Germany, March 6.—This town's poor ate election placards and smacked their lips. It was all due to a new idea in propaganda that occurred to Communists before recent elections. A troop of geese appeared in the streets. Each was painted with flaming red streaks to set off the Communist insignia, the hammer and sickle. They were fed to the poor.

Why You Are Fat!

CHICAGO, March 6.—Retired gentlemen, who wish to reduce their belt lines, might do so by looking after their feet. Dr. L. L. Spanabel, president of the Illinois chiropodists, said the correction could be made through the feet because the main nerve center seems to be in the ball of the foot.

LITTY TO LIFT MARCH 20 LIMIT ON TAX PAYING

County Treasurer Takes Initiative In Aiding Real Estate Owners

ACT PROMPTED BY BANK SITUATION

Bank Checks Will Be Received and Held Until Situation Clears

The deadline for the payment of real estate taxes, set for March 20, was extended indefinitely in an announcement today by County Treasurer John C. Litt.

Acting on his own initiative, Litt announced that the tax books will be open for an indefinite period unless the Ohio tax commission forces him to adhere to the deadline.

He also announced that if the taxpayers wish to do so, they may pay their taxes with bank checks. The checks, he said, will be pinned to receipts and kept on file at his office until the present banking situation "clears up."

No official record will be made on the treasurer's books, however, of the payment until checks go through banks on which they are drawn. After this is done receipts will be forwarded to payers.

The treasurer's office last week had notified taxpayers that checks would not be received for tax payments in view of the banking situation.

Foreign Exchange Closes

ROME, March 6.—The foreign exchange closed today following news of President Roosevelt's proclamation and the two largest Italian banks, Credito Italiano and Banca Commerciale Italiana, refused to buy dollars or set a price for them.

The American Express was paying 18.96 lire, taking the customer's name and address with the promise that if the rate impossible to fix now because of the lack of international quotations, should be more it will pay the difference later.

The stock exchange opened but dealings in Italian dollar securities were suspended.

Suspend Foreign Exchange

TOKYO, March 6.—Japanese banks suspended foreign exchange operations today for at least two days. Leaders believe the suspension will continue for the duration of the American banking holiday.

Paul got a telegram from his father, a Cleveland, O., merchant. "Rush all cash you can spare," the strange message read: "Bank closed."

How World Looks Upon Bank Crisis

(By Associated Press)
"Business As Usual"

LONDON, March 6.—Great Britain's policy today was "business as usual" while the government here watched with sympathetic interest the firm steps being taken by the Roosevelt administration to deal with America's domestic banking problem.

The exchange market in London will continue to deal with all currencies with the exception of dollars were rendered impossible for the time being because delivery of dollars cannot be obtained during the American banking holiday.

London banks have arranged to supply American travelers who have letters of credit in dollars with sterling for their immediate use.

Dollar Unquoted

PARIS, March 6.—The dollar was still unquoted today, but trading on other foreign exchanges continued, with considerable offers of Dutch guilders, German marks and Swiss francs. Bankers said this apparently was being done by interests needing French francs and unable to convert dollar credits.

Paris American banks were advancing customers three-fourths of exchange on dollar checks. Tourists agencies were cashing travelers checks at the normal rate of 24 francs per dollar.

Important Topic In Berlin

BERLIN, March 6.—Next to the German election results, the American dollar was the main topic in boerse (exchange) circles today, where satisfaction was expressed that the gold standard in America apparently is safe.

The boerse opened at noon with hardly any business being offered and dollars unquoted.

Plan Use of Substitute

Most of them also were prepared to start circulation of clearing house scrip or other "evidence of claims against banking institutions" immediately federal permission to reopen is granted.

The presidential closing order sealed in the Ohio banks the millions of dollars in new deposits placed there under the legislative mandate that no banking in case free from all restrictions and ready for payment on demand.

State officials and bankers united in expressing the belief these funds quickly would be freed by making retroactive to last Monday in Ohio the president's order that all newly deposited funds "shall be subject to withdrawal on demand without any restriction or limitation."

Will Support President

Gov. George White, in Washington for the conference of governors today, issued no official statement but in a long distance telephone conversation with Theodore H. Tamm, director of commerce, committed the state administration to these words:

"Ohio will, of course, support the president's proclamation."

Previously, he had declined to declare a banking holiday in Ohio although he presented to the legislature the two bills that gave the banking superintendent authority to control and restrict the withdrawal of deposits while at the same time making it mandatory on state banks to keep all new deposits in their original cash form.

Ohio Plans Circulation of Scrip to Maintain Industry; Larger Cities Take Action

(By Associated Press)
COLUMBUS, March 6.—The Ohio plan for meeting the banking emergency in effect today the nation's plan but it looked securely in the vaults of the state's 300 banks. The limited funds previously available.

How long that situation would continue was a matter of conjecture pending official interpretation of President Roosevelt's proclamation closing the banks of the nation for four days.

It was expected, however, that before the banking holiday expires most of Ohio financial houses would resume operations on the restricted withdrawal basis they adopted with state sanction last week.

Unemployment Unit Will Meet Tuesday

The Salem Unemployment league will hold its regular weekly meeting at the Memorial building at 7:30 p. m. Tuesday when a state speaker is expected to discuss current economic and industrial problems.

The Salem league, affiliated with the Ohio and National Unemployment units, has been organized as a non-partisan, non-political body with Charles Wilson as president. Officials said that it now includes approximately 160 men and women members.

Tuesday night's meeting was originally scheduled Wednesday.

The Salem league has adopted recommendations of the state organization, including suggestions for a "complete moratorium on all taxation except income and inheritance taxes" and the complete preservation of the state's educational system.

Adoption by the state of legislation to protect workers and farmers against old age, sickness and unemployment is also recommended.

What Is Scrip, How Do You Get It and How Is It Used?

Millions Are Learning the Answers Today As Emergency Currency Is Being Prepared

(By Associated Press)
NEW YORK, March 6.—What is scrip, how does one get it and how does one use it?

The answers to those questions were being learned by millions today as sales of the freshly-printed emergency currency were prepared for distribution.

Clearing house scrip, being prepared by the New York Clearing House association, consists of paper certificates based on bank deposits. They are issued by a group of banks, rather than by one banking institution.

Although details of the certificate plan announced yesterday by Mortimer Buckner, head of the Clearing House association, have not yet been made public, it was believed the new medium of exchange would be paid out by the banks in lieu of the old. A depositor appearing at a bank to cash a check would be given the certificates to the full amount of the check.

Acceptable at Parity

It would also be the money in which pay checks were cashed, and it would be accepted by merchants, landlords, railroads and others instead of the old currency. Bankers said that since the scrip would be accepted for deposit at parity by all clearing house members, it would serve as a satisfactory medium of exchange.

The certificates, which represent actual deposits, will be issued, it was believed, in denominations ranging from $1 up. It was the understanding here that banks, when they reopen, might be permitted to pay out fractional coin—that is, coins ranging from pennies to half dollars—to meet the need for change.

Pending authoritative statements, it was the belief that bankers were working on a plan for a uniform standard of collateral throughout the country. In this way, the New York scrip could circulate in other cities and vice versa. Thus it appeared that the new money might be acceptable at or near parity throughout the nation.

Bankers recalled the crisis of 1907. The last occasion on which scrip certificates were used here. They were, in effect, liens or obligations against the assets of the banks. In New York they were used primarily for payment between banks, but in other sections they circulated just like money. When the need for them disappeared, they were retired as fast as they were deposited in banks.

More Details Expected

More details about the scrip were expected shortly. Buckner's statement, issued last night, said only that the Clearing House association had adopted a certificate plan to be put into effect "when, and as if the present emergency demanded it."

The Bronx plant of the American Bank Note company hummed with activity as demands for scrip came from many parts of the country. Pleas for quick shipment of the certificates to villages and big cities burned up telephone wires.

Orders from private firms for scrip in which to pay employees, also came in. Every one was talking scrip. Every one was asking questions about it. Not all of them could be answered definitely immediately, but in general, it may be said that clearing house certificates are a new kind of money, usable as such in the ordinary transactions of business. During the duration of the emergency they are not cashed, however, and thus they do not deplete bank funds.

the earmarking of gold for foreign account.

Today, treasury officials prepared orders for the issuance of clearing house certificates to be used as scrip during the holiday and Mr. Roosevelt and his advisers shaped an emergency legislative program to be presented to congress in special session Thursday.

Governors Confer

Governors who attended the inauguration Saturday were called to the white house before lunch for a conference, with the banking crisis foremost of the topics for discussion. The governors' views were sought for the drafting of the remedial legislation which congress will be asked to enact within a few hours after it meets.

A quick succession of events without parallel in peace time brought forth two proclamations from the white house yesterday as Mr. Roosevelt grasped the war-time dictatorial powers he pledged himself to seek if the situation called for such bold action.

First he met with his cabinet and then congressional leaders. A proclamation convening congress into special session at noon Thursday followed. Close to midnight came the second proclamation, declaring a banking holiday.

Secretary Woodin of the treasury, was emphatic in his assertion that the President's action in suspending banking business did not take the United States off the gold standard. Some financial authorities raised this question, but most agreed it was without merit inasmuch as the measure was decidedly temporary in effect.

Gold Flow Stopped

Woodin indicated that cash windfalls of the treasury would be closed through the holiday and with the Federal Reserve banks closed also, all redemption of currency in gold would be stopped completely.

The holiday was declared under the trading with the enemy act passed in 1917. It can be extended if necessary if congress has not put through the emergency legislation by Friday morning.

In the proclamation Mr. Roosevelt empowered Secretary Woodin to "direct, require or permit" the issuance of clearing house certificates. Officials were at this morning to work out such a plan to keep the channels of exchange open and insure the orderly conduct of business.

The proclamation cited "heavy and widespread withdrawals of gold and currency from our banking institutions for the purpose of hoarding" and "increasingly speculative activity abroad in foreign exchange" which "has resulted in severe drains on the nation's stocks of gold."

It is in the best interests of all bank depositors," the document said, "that a period of respite be provided with a view to preventing further hoarding of coin, bullion or currency or speculation in foreign exchange and permitting the application of appropriate measures to protect the interests of our people."

THE CRISIS IS HERE

The first week in March has closed with the nation's financial structure existing in a state of protected paralysis. The crisis which has been approaching so long is here.

From now on there is only one direction to go—up! There need be no further worry about forerunning protection of weakened institutions. All are reduced to the same level.

Any intelligent move now is bound to be an improvement. The extraordinary proportions of the emergency have called out a new spirit of determination, greater than anything seen this far in the years of the depression.

The United States has tried to avoid and, failing, has lived in fear of what has come to pass. The crisis is here. As surely as a nation of hardy men and women survived the greater crises of the past, this one, too, will pass into history as a threat to security which was repulsed by the courage of a vigorous people.

ROOSEVELT'S MESSAGE

President Roosevelt's inaugural address, awaited with acute expectancy by his disturbed countrymen, satisfied their inarticulate but obvious demand for a pledge of vigorous leadership.

They found in it a spirit of thought and a pledge of action which are needed reassurance of active presidential leadership. President Roosevelt has dedicated himself to the task in a way that certifies definitely his realization of the temper of the people.

He hopes that the "normal balance" of executive and legislative authority may be adequate to meet the crisis. If they are not, if the representative system proved inadequate, he will ask for the "one remaining instrument to meet the crisis—broad executive power to wage a war against the emergency."

He assures his countrymen that they have not failed under their system of government. There are still means of bringing about vigorous action. He interprets his election as a mandate for that purpose. He has been made the "present instrument of their wishes." He will act in accordance with what he feels to be the popular wish.

He will use every available means to increase employment.

He will endeavor to redistribute population to better economic advantage.

He will try to raise the value of agricultural products.

He will attempt to prevent loss by mortgage foreclosures.

He will advocate national planning for enterprises of a public character.

Finally, he will seek remedies for the sorest spot in the dislocation of the economic structure—an end to speculation with other people's money. His countrymen interpret this to mean an end to a financial order which has caused them infinite hardship by its sometimes unpremeditated viciousness. They are in accord.

During the days and weeks to come the broad outlines of this program will be filled in with details. The situation will bring about a rapid experience of the policies of this new administration from which so much is expected—from which so much must come to direct a revitalized national determination of direct action against those forces of evil that have prevailed so long.

Dryness Of Skin, Common Complaint

Dryness of the skin and hair is a common complaint. It is often associated with dryness and brittleness of the nails. There are many causes of this condition, but often its importance is overlooked and little attention is given to it. This is unfortunate because it may be a sign of a serious glandular disturbance of the body.

"Myxedema" is the name of a disease which may cause certain changes in the skin, nails and hair. The symptoms of this disease can be traced to a shrinkage of the thyroid gland. While the early symptoms are vague and indefinite, they should be given immediate attention.

In this affliction the skin is dry and scaly and the hair falls out. The nails are brittle and the skin around the nails is dry and cracked. The sufferer from this disease looks as if he had gained weight, but this appearance is due to a swelling of the skin of the face and legs.

Dryness and other changes of the skin and nails may be due to the excessive use of some variety of soap which removes oil from the skin. An occasional person has a sensitive skin, with lack of the natural oil. Then the skin easily becomes dry and cracks readily. This is particularly true of the skin around the nails.

Sometimes this dryness and cracking of the skin can be traced to the use of certain chemicals used in manicuring. Continued irritation around the nail leads to a condition called "dramitis," or inflammation of the skin. Relief and cure are easily brought about by leaving off the irritant. But if the nails continue to be dry, brittle or painful, consult with your physician.

Never neglect an injury of your hands. If you prick your finger, be sure that an antiseptic is applied. When you manicure your nails avoid irritating chemicals. Use plenty of soap and water and never use a rusty file or scissors. Infections which come from rusty objects are particularly dangerous.

In what I have said I do not mean to imply that dryness of the skin around the nails is to be considered as a serious disease. But it should not be considered lightly and ignored. Continued dryness of the skin, hair and nails is usually, though, not always, indicative of some disease.

What I would like to impress upon you is that though it does not mean a serious disease in every instance, it does warrant a complete physical examination by the doctor. He must check up on your heart, kidneys, lungs, general circulation and glandular system. If these are all found to be satisfactory, there is no need for worry.

Picture of a Little Man Strutting His Stuff

What Others Say

NO MORE TAXES!

There is something sinister in the organized effort now under way at Columbus to have the legislature levy a general sales tax as an aid to spendthrift groups desperately in need of funds to carry on their extravagant programs.

The Beacon Journal has always favored the principle of a sales tax, broadly and equally applied, as a revenue measure. But we have held that such a tax should be in substitution of all other levies, including taxes on incomes, direct levies on farms and homes and other forms of real estate, and the many galling excise collections that the public has properly rated as "nuisance taxes." Three years ago the Beacon Journal urged adoption of a state sales tax as a substitute for the tax on intangibles, whose later adoption through a constitutional amendment has been more than disappointing in more ways than one.

We have never approved that vicious policy of officialdom, which turns to the sales tax only after it has victimized and bled white those who have to sustain these other forms of tax extortion. To these millions of victims who have paid and will continue to pay such established levies the sales tax would be only an added oppression.

Yet this is the system which the Ohio legislature is asked to set up. Since one of its advocates declares that it will bring $20,000,000 of new revenue to the state treasury, to be passed on to beneficiaries who will find both pleasure and profit in spending it, we are not surprised that all the lobbies for special interests are for it and soon will be cracking the whip to put it through.

In the forefront of the groups that are handing out sales tax propaganda are the road, school and jobholders' lobbies. All of them are for it because it promises to provide a great reservoir of easy money that will enable them to carry on their services and establishments upon the 1923 level. If they can get their hands upon $60,000,000 to $100,000,000 they can snap their fingers at public demands for retrenchment in government costs. What do they care for the distress which such a colossal levy will bring to trade and industry already staggering under excessive tax burdens?

As usual we hear the fictitious claim that if a sales tax is adopted it will "relieve real estate." We heard the same illusory plea when the state was beguiled into voting the classification amendment which relieved the owners of money, stocks, bonds and other intangibles from paying upon the same uniform rule of assessment that is applied to the owners of homes and farms. The latter, when they look at their undiminished tax bills, may be their own judges of how badly they were gulled when they invested their votes in these false but glittering promises.

The same bad faith attends the drive to have Ohio adopt the sales tax. As in the fight for classification the pledge is given that this also will "relieve real estate," but the measure itself carries no assured warrant by which this is to be done. Real estate will continue then as now subject to whatever levy the multiple tax agencies may want to make upon it, and will have to pay or be auctioned off under the hammer of the sheriff.

A circumstance that further impugns the good faith of claims that a general sales levy will bring relief to other now overtaxed classes is the attitude of the road lobby toward it. The road contractors do not propose to abandon the present gas tax and license system that takes more than $60,000,000 a year from the pockets of Ohio motorists. They are for the general sales tax only because it will provide a fund that will sate the appetites of other spending groups and thus abate pressure for diversion of the gas and license revenue from highway building.

When the federal and state governments propose a scientific application of the sales tax to take the place of all other forms of taxation the Beacon Journal will be for it. But the sales tax conspiracy now in process at Columbus is simply the ally of squander, and it should be defeated. If it were an honest and sincere effort to bring tax relief to the people the lobbies would not be for it. This of itself is the one best reason why Ohio citizens who object to having $60,000,000 added in a lump to their present ruinous tax bills should be against it, and demand that the legislature make no resort to such a tyranny.—Akron Beacon Journal.

HOBBIES

Many individuals cultivate a hobby, collect articles in which they are interested, do unusual tasks, and develop handicraft in various lines.

One grows flowers, another does wood carving, another is devoted to landscaping grounds about the home, one may have a workshop in the basement in which many articles of real value are manufactured.

A prominent musical leader in an Ohio city has been making pieces of furniture for years. His study and his home contain wonderful chairs, tables and desks, the product of his skill and in the making of what he has found delightful occupation for leisure hours.

Recently in Philadelphia the employees of the lighting company there staged a show of the products of the hobbies of the 150 individuals. More than 900 articles were on display and the variety was astonishing. One man had given years of time to cutting and mounting semi-precious stones and was an expert in his line.

Hobbies are not productive of product, but they fill many hours with pleasant occupation and gives satisfaction to the skillful individual in being able to do tasks in which personal interest has been developed.—Ohio State Journal.

Will Rogers and Brown are by far the least clothes-conscious of all who have attained celebrity. In the cautious maturity that distinguishes most of their fellows, they bring a haphazard of baggy pants, run-down shoes and sorry scarves. Yet, they express a Voltaire truism: "The best philosophical brew often comes from battered tureen."

Also, a note from Irene Castle, and one from Tom Millard, the world-wanderer, temporarily anchored at the Algonquin.

So, at my stint, Joe Topitzky dropped by with news from California. Floyd Gibbons called, too, walking the floor nervously and departing as suddenly as a tornado. Then, to the Chatham to a gathering including Christopher Morley, Adela Rogers St. John, Kathleen and Charles Norris.

Celebrity-clottings in the foyers at theatrical first nights attract many who will drop outside in the wind and the rain for a peep at their favorite. At a recent auspicious premiere, I watched to see who was the object of the greatest curiosity. "It seemed to me" that it was Heywood Brown, and to all appearances, he was totally oblivious of the neck craning.

In the world of doomsday, beating to the punch often means victory too. With my two pooches, the older Boston is cock of the wall. But today the Sealham drifted in, stretched, and, for no reason at all, made a quick, savage lunge. The amazed Boston nearly tore off a door rounding a turn for his hide-away, under the bed.

Other days, a Broadway noon always revealed two figures idling in front of the Astor—Louis Mann and Leon Friedman. Mann is gone, but today I noticed Friedman, as copper and detached as he was 20 years ago, "glorifying the American girl."

Friedman was in the employ of Florenz Ziegfeld longer than any other person—his press agent for 22 years, a high tribute to his ability. He was one of the few press agents who preferred the road to New York.

Jack Francis, Broadway gallant, and who once was engaged to Evelyn Thaw, is now an official greeter for a Hollywood studio. Recently, he was playing Lord Dawson of Pease, King George's physician, about Missed a scout found Francis had taken the distinguished doctor to one side to have him examine his heart. Broadway.

Charles Chaplin, celebrated city editor, wore rubbers the year round. Raymond Carroll, Paris correspondent, has not missed meeting an American boat train in 10 years. Diana Wynward, of the movies, doubled her savings in London gold stocks recently.

Benny Rubin was host to a group of out-of-work chorus girls at a recent noon hour. One was a Russian, whose English was uncertain. When the waiter took her order, she said: "Caviar." To which Rubin screamed: "Pay no attention to her dialect. She'll settle for a herring."

"THE LOVE TRAP"

by ROBERT TERRY SHANNON

COPYRIGHT BY KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

Pretty Mary Kennedy breaks her engagement to elderly Buck Landers, wealthy sports promoter, when she falls in love with his young ward, Steve Ward. Landers tries to force Mary to marry him by kidnapping Steve and threatening him, unless she does. He gives Mary twenty-four hours to decide.

She enlists the aid of Carlotta, Landers' former sweetheart, who suggests that a flirtation with Bat may reveal Steve's whereabouts.

Carlotta and Mary go to see Landers and Carlotta warns him against the kidnapping.

CHAPTER TWENTY-SEVEN
Carlotta Guido's denunciation of Landers seemed to be producing a novel effect upon the man who had been so self-possessed with Mary.

His face began to look a little mottled. "I—I—" he stopped. For the first time, he showed hesitation and doubt. But his uncertainty passed in a flash and he threw his head back.

"I warned you once before—leave me alone and keep out of this!" He glared at Carlotta Guido. "You can be handled just the same as anybody else. I'm shaking myself loose from this Broadway mob and you're wasting your time trying to hold me."

"You'll be telling your story to a police inspector pretty soon if you don't watch out," she sneered at him. "You're not so big in this town, feller."

He stared at her, poker-faced.

"That crack about the police inspector doesn't go so good with me, Carlotta. As a matter of fact, you sound a little like a squealer to me yourself. That's funny, too—considering that the cops never have found out what you know about the Goldstein murder. Nobody even tipped me off you were in Goldstein's apartment that night. They'd give a lot to break that case and convict somebody. A woman in your shoes ought to walk a pretty straight line, Carlotta. Think that over, before you start butting in my affairs."

Mary was startled at the change that had come over Carlotta Guido. The woman's brassiness had all gone—her olive color had faded into a pasty pallor and the bold eyes were humble with fear.

"They could cut my tongue out before I'd ever squeal on you, Buck," she said. "You know that."

"I don't like the way you talk," she said. "It's only for your own good. Buck—I swear it is. This kid don't care anything about you. Me, I'm the only one who would stick to you through thick and thin."

"That's fine—when I need you, I'll call on you."

Carlotta snorted uneasily on her feet. Landers was staring from her to the door, but she was reluctant to go.

"You ain't treating me right, Buck," she said. "You're just a clump to this trail here. I'm the only one on earth that loves you."

Landers paid no attention to her. "It hasn't done you any good to spill the works to Carlotta," he said to Mary. "She's all washed up with me. What I told you before still stands, and you better be sensible."

"You don't really care for me, M. Landers and you know you don't. You're just being stubborn and foolish. You're throwing down the only woman who cares a rap about you and you're making a fool of yourself over one that couldn't ever care for me. It isn't even foolish—it's plain silly!"

Carlotta threw herself down on the sofa, stubbornly persistent.

"The trouble with Buck is," she said, "that he's climbed up too high in the world. You got to be top in your own racket, Buck, and you're up there now—just balancing up on the top. It's a pretty slippery place, too, up there—things that balance pretty generally are shaky. As long as a man is climbing he's pretty sensible. I've been with you through a couple of struggles, while you were getting up there, Buck, and I was pretty good then."

"Can that!" commanded Landers. "God, I hate to see you run yourself on account of a skunk!"

Carlotta went on fiercely. "I've seen guys like you take the big fall before. They get up in the cards and then they go to pieces. Rothstein got too smart for safety. And a dozen other big shots—men as big as you and bigger. And then they wonder why somebody gets 'em! Nobody gets 'em—they get themselves." Her breast was rising and falling with her shortness of breath. "I'm telling you, Buck, you better listen to Carlotta, honey. I'm the one that's standing between you and a lot of grief—the only one."

STOMACH UPSET

Get at the real cause. That's what thousands of stomach sufferers are doing now. Instead of taking tonics, or trying to patch up a poor digestion, they are attacking the real cause of the ailment—clogged liver and disordered bowels.

Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets help ease the liver in a soothing, healing way. When the liver and bowels are performing their natural functions, people rarely suffer from indigestion and stomach troubles.

Have your bad taste coated tongue, poor appetite, a lazy, don't-care feeling, no ambition or energy, trouble with undigested food? Try Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound. Know them by their olive color. They do the work without griping, cramps or pain. All druggists, 15c, 30c and 60c. Take one or two at bedtime for quick relief. Eat what you like.

Landers lit a cigar. "And the only reason I let you keep on talking," he said, "is to get it out of your system. That line won't work with me any more. I listened to it for a long time, and gave you a lot of dough. You ought to have a chunk of it saved up—so you're quits."

"Some day you'll wish to God you'd listened to me," Carlotta breathed.

Landers shrugged.

"I'm sorry you let yourself in to hear all this, Mary," he said, "but it doesn't mean anything, after all. It's been a long time since anybody bluffed me, and Carlotta hasn't got a chance with my line." He looked at his former sweetheart with insolent eyes. "You better forget me, Carlotta. Go make a hit with Moe Levy—he always had an eye for you."

Carlotta sprang to her feet, fumbling with her hand bag. Her eyes were wide. "You can't pass me on to another man, you—"

Landers rushed at her and seized the bag from her hands; he threw it across the room and it struck on a table beside Mary.

"Don't ever try to pull a knife on me again," he cried furiously. "I'll never cash in by that route—so don't waste your time. Now get out of here!"

He threw open the door and seized Carlotta by the shoulders, pushed her out into the corridor and slammed the door behind her. Mary heard the key turn in the lock. She had never seen Landers so excited before—his face was blanching, and the pupils of his cold eyes were dancing.

"I thought you had more sense than to blab to a woman like that!" he said bitterly. "She can't help you. All you're doing is making it worse for Steve. I was willing to play fair with you, but if you drive me to the extreme limit, remember, it's all your own fault. You might as well learn, sooner or later, that all this stalling isn't going to do you any good."

"It's not doing you any good, either," Mary told him coldly.

Exasperation contorted his face. "All right—have your own way!" he growled. "It's true I cannot force you to marry me. You'd have to do it voluntarily, but at the same time never forget it, if anything goes wrong, God help your boy friend. That's one thing you can depend on. I'd fix him if it was the last thing I did on earth—if you crossed me."

Stark terror gripped her heart, but something stronger forced her to keep her eyes level. She could only help Steve by strength, not by weakness.

"May I go now, please?" she asked quietly.

Landers stared at her in silence and then flung open the door.

"Nothing has changed and nothing is going to change," he assured her. "I expect my answer tomorrow."

She walked out of the apartment and the door closed behind her. Carlotta Guido was nowhere in sight—most likely she had slunk away from the hotel beaten in her effort. But somewhere in the city, Mary imagined, the woman was nursing her hurt pride and secretly fanning her own dangerous fires.

Mary rang for the elevator and at that moment discovered she carried a strange hand bag. In a moment it flashed back to her that she had picked up Carlotta's bag instead of her own from the table where Landers had flung it. But it made no difference—the mistake was trivial. Some weight in the bag made it unusually heavy, and while she waited for the elevator she unfastened the clasp to glance inside. What she saw was a blue-black automatic pistol—small compact, deadly.

New National City Bank Head Started Career in Chocolate

Despite Sweet Beginning, James H. Perkins Carved Out Noteworthy Career as Banker—Decorated for Distinguished Services in World War.

JAMES H. PERKINS

PERKINS DURING WORLD WAR

Probably unique among contemporary financial giants is James H. Perkins, who recently succeeded Charles E. Mitchell as chairman of the National City Bank of New York. For unlike most money moguls Perkins has not been a banker all his life—in fact, his first battle in the great fight for a career was waged in the chocolate business. Born in Milton, Mass., in 1876, Perkins was graduated from Harvard in 1898. For seven years thereafter he was in the employ of a firm of chocolate manufacturers, where he gave early indications of reaching the top of the tree in that particular business. But he wasn't satisfied. And in 1905 Perkins entered the banking business in Boston. After three years in the Hub City as vice-president of the American Trust Company, he accepted a vice-presidency of the National Commercial Bank of Albany. He was elected president of that institution in 1912. Two years later he came to the National City Bank, where he remained until the United States entered the World War. Perkins served overseas as Red Cross commissioner and officer in the American Army. After the Armistice he was with the Army of Occupation in Germany. He was decorated by three governments for distinguished service in Europe. In 1921, Perkins was elected president of the Farmers Loan and Trust Company, which was later taken over by the National City and renamed City Bank Farmers Trust. Perkins continued as its head until he was called to fill the post vacated by Mitchell's resignation.

Made when he was interviewed by reporters on the lawn of the Jackson Memorial Hospital in Miami, Fla., after he visited Mayor Anton Cermak of Chicago a few days ago, this picture is probably the last to be made of Senator Thomas J. Senator Walsh died of a heart attack on a train in which he was bringing his Cuban bride of less than a week to the capital for the inauguration of Franklin D. Roosevelt. The Senator's body was taken from the train at Rocky Mount, N. C.

THE SCRIPTS
SWALLOWED OUR OIL
THE COUNTERFEIT BILL

By Arthur Brisbane

(Copyright 1933 By King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

LOS ANGELES—Short of active calamity, the most unpleasant thing is uncertainty. A missionary held by cannibal islanders wants to know what decision the cannibal cook will reach. Today, with all banks closed by official order, in 48 states, big men would like to know what will happen.

WE SHOULD be grateful, for we at least know now that the depression has run its course, at least on the surface. We are like the little boy who has swallowed castor oil and is glad that it has gone down.

Money will be provided, scrip in some states, clearing house certificates in others. And business will go on with some kind of money and good money. For while the old-fashioned, depressed silver dollar will look like something to be treasured. But all money is only somebody's promise to pay a government, a bank or an individual. No money is better than the name on it, or better than the credit of those who declare it "worth" so much an ounce. The money that you will get in exchange for your check or as pay for your work will be as good as any money you ever got. Only at first, as it is a new kind of money, be a little careful about counterfeits. This advice is for business men especially.

NOBODY really knows anything about money. It is a mystery like electricity. Men use it, deal in it, and do not understand it.

Judge William Doran of Los Angeles told this story yesterday:

"A man found a $10 bill with an unusual ink spot on it. He used it in paying a tailor's bill. The tailor paid his grocer. The grocer paid his hired man. The hired man paid his rent. The landlord used the money to pay a bill for the individual who had originally found the $10 note. That individual noticing the same ink spot, mused philosophically, then took the $10 bill to his bank. The banker said: 'This is a counterfeit, and under the law I must destroy it and did so. But the man who originally found it was no worse off than he had been.'

"And that counterfeit $10 bill had paid $80 in other bills, perfectly satisfactorily and the $10 bill was back in the bank and destroyed as a counterfeit."

Think about that.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S inauguration speech encourages many. It is the habit of the Roosevelt's, as you have learned from the late Theodore, to say things emphatically and it is reasonable to expect increasing emphasis as Franklin D. Roosevelt goes deeper into his job.

You may hear him say:

"More than $20,000,000,000 are hidden away in bonds issued by the United States government. These thousands of millions are idle. The owners, avoiding active use of their wealth, draw from taxpayers nearly $1,000,000,000 a year in interest. These bonds represent our real 'hoarding.' I am going to end half of it, call in 10,000 millions of bonds, that now bear interest, and exchange for them perfectly good money, with the government's good promise to pay, save 400 millions a year in interest for the people, and let the owners of the nice new money put it into circulation, and break depression."

HAVRE, Mont.—Physicians recently removed a ball of hair weighing two pounds from the stomach of Sophie Vieronki, 13. The child had swallowed hair during her sleep, it was said.

MISSOULA, Mont.—Six emergency landing fields for airplanes have been completed in Montana and northern Idaho, the aeronautics department of the federal department of commerce has announced. Four of the fields were built during 1932 and as many more probably will be constructed in 1933, officials said.

ILLUSION:

In India, the fakirs present a spectacle to tourists. Two lovely performers break bottles and lamp chimneys before the eyes of the audience, and throw the jagged pieces into a box already filled with broken glass. They step barefooted into the box and do an Oriental dance in the glass without injury.

EXPLANATION:

The performers toughen their feet in a strong solution of alum water and thoroughly rub them with pulverized resin before they appear. They throw the freshly broken glass around the edges of the platform. The glass on which they actually do dance is very thick, heavy, and filed or ground so that the sharp edges are rounded off. The girls just pretend to dance on the sharp glass.

One of the tricks of cigarette advertising is to pretend that "Heat Treatment" is an exclusive process, making one cigarette better than any other.

EXPLANATION: All cigarette manufacturers use heat treatment. It is a routine process of manufacture. The first Camel cigarette ever made was manufactured under the heat-treating process.

process. Every one of the billions of Camels produced since has received the necessary heat treatment.

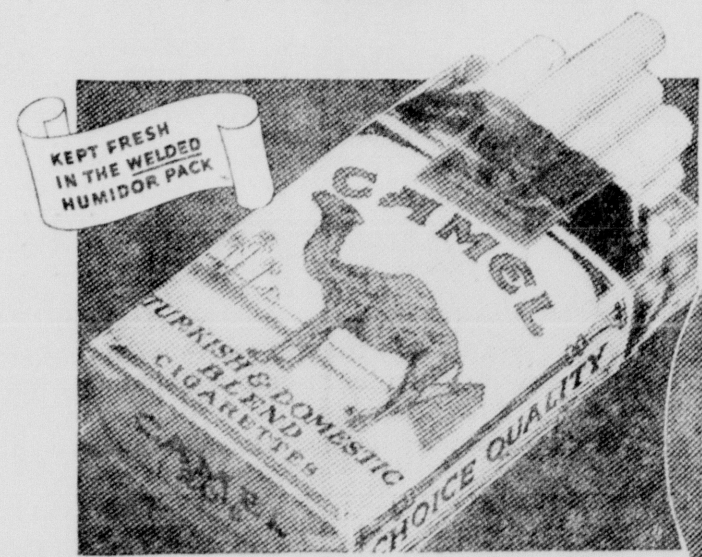

Harsh, raw tobaccos require intensive processing under high temperatures. The more expensive tobaccos, which are naturally mild, call for only a moderate application of heat. Heat treatment never can make cheap, inferior tobacco good.

It is a fact, well known by leaf tobacco experts, that Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE tobaccos than any other popular brand.

This is the most important statement ever made in a cigarette advertisement. Weigh its words. Consider what it means. Then try Camels.

ing up a successful coal and trucking business.

From this he rose through real estate and banking operations, and finally overtook the regime of William Hale Thompson to become mayor of Chicago in 1931, assuming the city's desperate financial problems.

His wife was Mary Horejas of Chicago, who died in 1928. They had three daughters.

Others at the bedside included Alderman Edward P. Kelly, South park commissioner at Chicago, who made the first announcement of the mayor's death. Dr. Frederick Tice, Dr. R. C. Woodward, superintendent of the hospital, Mrs. Walter Wright of Chicago, and Mrs. Clara Besley, secretary to the mayor, Joe Cermak, a brother, Mrs. John Kallal, sister, and Dr. Frank Jirka.

Gangrene Appears
Mayor Cermak had previously rallied after three crises in his condition. Colitis, threatened heart failure and pneumonia beset him in quick succession just as his physicians had begun to believe he would recover from the bullet wound.

Physicians still were optimistic Saturday but that night gangrene appeared in the right lung, the one grazed by Zaurer's bullet, and he grew steadily weaker. A third blood transfusion was performed yesterday in an attempt to check the gangrene, but the mayor did not recover and he lapsed into a coma last night.

FEW LENTEN DISHES TO VARY MENU

Here Are Some Ideas on Preparing Fish Differently

Time for some nice new Lenten dishes to add piquancy to the meal and vary the old tired standbys. Some new fish recipes are always welcome, but never more than in Lent. And so I'm pleased to be able to offer you some nice new ones.

One very clever chef recently had an inspiration and thought of combining waffles and codfish and made a most delectable dish, just the thing for a Lenten luncheon or supper. Just make your waffles and fold in cooked and flaked codfish. Bake in a hot waffle iron. Egg sauce or cheese sauce is delightful with this delectable dish or failing that a few nice eggs of butter will do. A good waffle is made by sifting one and a half cups of flour, two teaspoons of baking powder, half teaspoon salt. Add one cup of milk, two well-beaten eggs and four tablespoons melted butter.

A Mackerel Dish

Here's another scrumptious Lenten dish made with mackerel. Personally, I like the canned mackerel, canned right at the ocean side directly the shining fish is brought in from the depths. All one does is to open the can. The fish is already baked. Mix some biscuit dough—make it rather rich. Roll it nice and flat. Cover with the mackerel and a dash of salt and pepper, then roll it up again for all it will hold like a jelly roll. That roll can be baked whole in a good hot oven in 15 minutes. Of if you want, you can cut down through the roll and bake individual rily-fishes that the youngsters will love. A hot white sauce goes splendidly with this dish. Add a generous sprinkling of parsley.

And while we're talking about canned mackerel here is a delightful dish for a cold day luncheon or for supper. It is deviled mackerel, solid, satisfying, piquant.

Alternate layers of cracker crumbs and the contents of a can of mackerel in a buttered baking dish, topping with crumbs and dotting with butter. Pour one and a half cups of milk, seasoned with one tablespoon of Worcestershire sauce and one tablespoon mustard, over the mixture. Bake covered in a hot oven (425 F.) for 15 minutes. Uncover and brown.

HOQUIAM, Wash.—This town needs an official frog catcher! A fine, robust croak rings through the city hall, but no one seems to be able to find the frog. Sometimes it seems to come underground. The next croak seems to come between walls, the next from the ceiling. The frog stops croaking when the rain ceases. But 16 inches of rain fell in January, accompanied by much croaking.

CHENEY, Wash.—Money is in circulation in this city. # Salem Draws Massillon For First Game In Akron Tournament

Quakers Upset Rayen--Scienceville Wins District Cage Honors

Compete in Sectional Cage Event for Right To Enter State Meet

One of three teams surviving competition in the Warren tournament, Salem High basketballers will battle for the right to advance into the annual state basketball tournament at Columbus next week when they compete in the sectional cage competition at Goodyear auditorium, Akron, this week.

Drawings made at the Tire City at midnight Saturday paired the Quakers off with the great Massillon High team for a clash scheduled at 7 p. m. Wednesday. It will be the first contest of the tournament which will continue Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights.

Other Tourney Pairings

Campbell Memorial and Scienceville are other representatives of the Warren tourney advancing to the Akron contests. Campbell defeated by Scienceville, 22-14, in finals Saturday night at Warren, will play Akron West, 1932 state champion, at 7:50 Wednesday while Scienceville will oppose Akron Garfield Friday night.

While Salem was losing to the crack Scienceville aggregation, 29-27, and defeating Youngstown Rayen, 36-25, Massillon survived play at Akron with a 40-28 triumph over Akron Kenmore and also ran wild to trounce a strong Medina quintet by the one-sided 44-6 score Saturday.

Other results at Akron are:

Minerva 21; Canton McKinley 20; Akron Garfield 18; Minerva 12; Akron West 22; Akron North 17; Akron Buchtel 20; Akron East 19; Akron South 17; Alliance 16.

Massillon Drubs Kenmore

Massillon in overhauling Kenmore, hopped into an 18-7 lead in the first quarter and increased it to 30-11 at the half. They coasted through the third period were still on top by 38-23 at its close, and then substituted freely in the fourth.

Sheridan Johnson, center, and Captain Pat Hintz, forward, shared scoring honors with 12 points apiece. It was the third consecutive game in which Johnson revealed himself as an offensive sensation. Alliance was the victim of tough luck in its game with Akron South. The Avengers had steered into a fourth-quarter lead, after trailing almost all the way, but saw their hopes of victory vanish when Chris Neldert, Cavalier guard, sunk a shot from near mid-court as the final gun sounded.

After a first-quarter deadlock, 2-2, the rivals continued to battle in even terms. A basket by Scott, Alliance's lone field goal of the first half, 45 seconds before the intermission again knotted the count, this time at 7-7.

Akron Team Takes Lead

The Cavaliers forced into a 13-11 lead in the third period, but the Avengers came back with a spurt at the outset of the fourth and at once juncture were commanding a 16-13 margin. Rosie Garcia and Neldert tossed free throws to pare the margin to one point and then Neldert came through with his long shot to snatch the victory. Worn and Russell shared scoring honors with six apiece.

Minerva was tied from its grueling game with McKinley in the afternoon found Garfield too strong in the punches. The Presidents hoped away to a 7-6 lead in the first quarter and increased it to 12-6 at the half. The two teams battled on even terms in the third period which ended 14-9. (Times Herald) scored, ended the attack with 12 points. Every member of the Cavaliers' team broke into the scoring column.

Stargun Stars for West

West, defending state champions, set up its margin of victory over North in the second period, running its half-mile advantage to 14-6. The Redskins sliced that lead to 18-11 in the third period and made further inroads in the fourth, but faded as the close. Sturgeon, forward, was high scorer with 10 points.

A fourth-quarter rally felt one point short of tying the score as East battled to Buchtel. Buchtel behind 11-10 at the quarter but fell behind 11-16 at the half. They regained the upper hand in the third period 13-13 and then fought off an Oriental spurt in the closing minutes of play. Plasco, forward, was high scorer with 11 points.

In semi-final games in the afternoon, Massillon laced Medina 44-6. Kenmore routed Ravenna 33-13 and Garfield eliminated Wadsworth 33-24.

Great things are predicted for this young man this coming season, if baseball experts know their stuff. He is Ray Starr, new pitcher of the New York Giants, now in training at Los Angeles. Starr was the most sensational pitcher in the International League last season. He is a former member of the St. Louis Cardinals.

MY GREATEST THRILL IN SPORTS

By CHARLES JONES.

Written for the Associated Press

When I played college football I expected to be the personal scrub. Coming to the Ohio State university from a small high school and being only a freshman and of especially light build—only 125 pounds—I had no hopes of making the varsity.

On Saturday afternoon, when the team played I sat alone, the sidelines with the rest of the scrubs. I didn't get further from the center line than I was the last likely to be in the lineup. Not that I minded, I was content enough to play the game for exercise and to scrimmage with the team on other afternoons during the week. It was all I could reasonably expect, when if I did dream a little now and then.

One day the dream came true. The coach ran, walked to the far end of the players' bench and spoke to me. "Get in there, fellow, and speed 'em up."

That was my biggest thrill in sports. Not that I was doing something spectacular, but to get the chance to be out on the field with a grand gang of boys who were doing thrilling things.

Roosevelt Says---

WASHINGTON, March 6.—Among the outstanding passages in the inaugural address of President Franklin D. Roosevelt were the following:

This is pre-eminently the time to speak the truth, the whole truth, frankly and to do it.

The only thing we have to fear is fear itself, nameless, unreasoning, unjustified terror which paralyzes needed efforts to convert retreat into advance.

Our distress comes from no failure of substance. . . . The rulers of the exchange of mankind's goods have failed through their own avarice and greed and their own incompetence, have admitted their failure and have abdicated.

Practices of the unscrupulous money changers stand indicted in the court of public opinion, rejected by the hearts and minds of men.

They only know the rules of a generation of self-seekers. They have no vision, and when there is no vision the people perish.

Recognition of that fact by our material wealth as the standard of success goes hand in hand with the abandonment of the false belief that public office and high political position are to be valued only by the standards of place and personal profits.

There must be an end to a conduct in banking and business which too often has given to a sacred trust the likeness of callous and selfish wrongdoing.

Our greatest primary task is to put people to work.

It can be accomplished in part by direct recruiting by the government itself, treating the task as we would treat the emergency of a war, but, at the same time, through this employment accomplishing greatly needed projects to stimulate and reorganize the use of our great natural resources.

There are many ways in which it can be helped, but it can never be helped by merely talking about it.

In our progress toward a resumption of work, we require two safeguards against a return of the evils of the old order. There must be a strict supervision of all banking and credits and investments. There must be an end to speculation with other people's money. And there must be provision for an adequate but sound currency.

I shall presently urge upon a new Congress in special session detailed measures . . . and I shall seek the immediate assistance of the forty-eight states.

I shall spare no effort to restore world trade by international economic readjustment, but the emergency at home cannot wait upon that.

In the field of world policy, I would dedicate this nation to the policy of the good neighbor, the neighbor who respectfully respects himself and because he does so, respects the rights of others, the neighbor who respects his obligations and respects the sanctity of his agreements in and with a world of neighbors.

It is to be hoped that the normal balance of executive and legislative authority may be wholly equal, wholly adequate to meet the unprecedented task before us . . . but . . . in the event that the national emergency is still critical, I shall not evade the clear course of duty that will then confront me.

I shall ask the Congress for the one remaining instrument to meet the crisis—broad executive powers to wage a war against the emergency as great as the power that could be given to me if we were in fact invaded by a foreign foe.

LAST evening at the State theater that gifted star of Broadway Mae West made her second appearance here when she was seen in "She Done Him Wrong."

This particular version varied, to some extent, from the original, or at least it might seem so from a glance at the reviews of countless critics who praised the film highly and apparently more evidence of shears at various points.

However it is worth while just to see that servant star of Broadway—Miss West. . . . Her role of Lady Lou is so well done, so entirely realistic that it is a pleasure just to watch her. . . . Her first appearance here was New Year's eve in "Night After Night."

Miss West, who wrote both the story and the dialogue gives her role a brilliant and vivid treatment and puts her lines over with a
